US def chief says NATO membership for Ukraine is unrealistic

AP, BRUSSELS: US Defence Secretary Pete Hegseth said Wednesday that NATO membership for Ukraine was unrealistic and in sweeping remarks suggested Kyiv should abandon hopes of winning all its territory back from Russia and instead prepare for a negotiated peace settlement to be backed up by international troops.

Hours later, President Donald Trump said he and Russian President Vladimir Putin had agreed to begin "negotiations" on ending the Ukraine war. In a social media post, the Republican disclosed a call between the two leaders and said they would "work together, very closely."

Addressing allies eager to hear how much continued support Washington intends to provide to the Ukrainian government, Hegseth indicated that Trump is determined to get Europe to assume most of the financial and military responsibilities for the defence of Ukraine, including a possible peacekeeping force that would not include US troops.

The defence secretary, making the first trip to NATO by a member of the new Trump administration, also said the force should not have Article 5 protections, which could require the US or the 31 other nations of the NATO alliance to come to the aid of those forces if they end up in contact with Russian forces.

Hegseth's stark message, and his insistence that Russia should keep some territory that Ukraine wants back, offered the closest look yet at how the administration might try to end the war.

The secretary's comments were also sure to dim Ukraine's hopes of making itself whole again and to complicate talks later this week between Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelenskyy and US Vice President JD Vance and other senior American officials at a major security conference in Munich.

"The United States does not believe that NATO membership for Ukraine is a realistic outcome of a negotiated settlement," Hegseth said, as Kyiv's backers gathered at NATO headquarters for a meeting to drum up more arms and ammunition for the war, which will soon enter its fourth year.

All 32 allies must agree for a country to join NATO, meaning that every member has a veto.

"Instead, any security guarantee must be backed by capable European and non-European troops," Hegseth said. "To be clear, as part of any security guarantee, there will not be US troops deployed to Ukraine."

Hegseth insisted that NATO should play no role in any future military mission to police the peace in Ukraine and that any peacekeeping troops should not be covered by the part of NATO's founding treaty that obliges all allies to come to the aid of any member under attack.

Article 5 has been activated only once, when European allies and Canada used the collective security guarantee to help the United States in the wake of the September 11, 2001, al-Qaida attacks on New York and Washington.

Hegseth also said Europe "must provide the overwhelming share of future lethal and nonlethal aid to Ukraine." Ukraine currently relies equally on Europe and the US for about 30 per cent each of its defence needs. The rest is produced by Ukraine itself.

Delhi private schools double down on excessive AI use

PTI, NEW DELHI: Is AI a boon or a bane? As the debate intensifies, several private schools in Delhi are doubling down on the misuse of AI and deploying software to detect if students are taking the help of tools to do assignments.

The fear is that excessive use of AI will stunt creativity and initiative, according to several educators.

Sudha Acharya, the principal of ITL International School in Dwarka, says, "We use various software to detect if students have used AI to finish their assignments." She fears that excessive use of AI tools will stunt students' creativity. "If any student is found using AI to complete internal assessments, they receive zero marks." AI can either be a boon or a bane, depending on how it is used, according to the educators PTI spoke to.

It can be highly beneficial if students use it to develop new skills but over-reliance can become a disadvantage, they say.

Mallika Preman, the principal of Tagore International School in Greater Kailash, believes that with technological advancements, students must adapt to modern learning methods. However, she discourages complete reliance on tools such as AI, instead guiding her students on how to leverage them to improve creativity.

Preman says AI can be integrated into learning without hampering students' originality.

"As technology advances, students must adapt to modern learning methods. We don't encourage complete reliance on AI but guide students on how to use these tools to improve their understanding of different formats and skills," she says.

The Sovereign School in Rohini is also taking action against students using AI to complete their assignments.

Delhi Private Teachers' Association chairperson MS Rawat laid stress on the importance of AI literacy for both students and educators.
