Texas measles outbreak hits 505 cases, spreading to various states

AP, WASHINGTON: A day care facility in a Texas county that's part of the measles outbreak has multiple cases, including children too young to be fully vaccinated, public health officials say. West Texas is in the middle of a still-growing measles outbreak with 505 cases reported on Tuesday. The state expanded the number of counties in the outbreak area this week to 10. The highly contagious virus began to spread in late January and health officials say it has spread to New Mexico, Oklahoma, Kansas and Mexico.

Three people who were unvaccinated have died from measles-related illnesses this year, including two elementary school-aged children in Texas. The second child died Thursday at a Lubbock hospital, and Health Secretary Robert F. Kennedy Jr. attended the funeral in Seminole, the epicentre of the outbreak.

As of Friday, there were seven cases at a day care where one young child who was infectious gave it to two other children before it spread to other classrooms, Lubbock Public Health director Katherine Wells said.

"Measles is so contagious I won't be surprised if it enters other facilities," Wells said.

There are more than 200 children at the day care, Wells said, and most have had at least one dose of the measles, mumps and rubella vaccine, which is first recommended between 12 and 15 months old and a second shot between 4 and 6 years old.

"We do have some children that have only received one dose that are now infected," she said.

The public health department is recommending that any child with only one vaccine get their second dose early, and changed its recommendation for kids in Lubbock County to get the first vaccine dose at 6 months old instead of 1. A child who is unvaccinated and attends the day care must stay home for 21 days since their last exposure, Wells said.

Case count and hospitalisation numbers in Texas have climbed steadily since the outbreak began, and spiked by 81 cases from March 28 to April 4.

On Tuesday, the state added another 24 cases to its count and two additional counties, Borden and Randall. One more person was hospitalized since Friday, with 57 total.

Prez Murmu: Indians aim to conquer hearts, not nations

PTI, LISBON: Indians do not want to conquer countries but want to conquer hearts, President Droupadi Murmu said while interacting with Indian researchers here on Tuesday. During an interactive session with Indian researchers at Champalimaud Centre for Unknowns, the president told them to be the best ambassadors of India as they are identified by the name of their country.

"You will excel in education. You will excel in research. You will become a good scholar but you will contribute to the economy and society, and follow rules and regulations here. Move ahead and make India proud," Murmu said in response to a question from a researcher.

The president could not hold back the teacher in herself as she stood up from her seat to respond to every question directed at her by the researchers.

"I had gone to a country where a senior leader asked me if Indians want to conquer the world. I said Indians do not want to conquer countries, they want to conquer hearts," she said.

When asked about the strides of women in India, Murmu said it is in Indian culture to say Sita Ram, Laxmi Narayan and address a gathering as "devi" (ladies) and sajjano (gentlemen").

Murmu said she feels proud seeing women medalists, senior women officers, and women leading in various fields. She said Portugal is a good friend of India, its people are friendly and generous, and the country is endowed with natural beauty.

The president was received at the Champalimaud Centre by Portugal President Marcelo Rebelo de Sousa and President of the Champalimaud Foundation Dr. Leonor Beleza.
