Congress protests against ED chargesheet in National Herald case

PTI, NEW DELHI: The Congress on Wednesday held protests outside Enforcement Directorate offices across the country over the agency's charge-sheet against Sonia Gandhi and Rahul Gandhi in the National Herald case and alleged that the action against its leaders showed panic and moral bankruptcy of the "despotic" government which wanted to divert attention from public issues and economic crisis.

The BJP stepped up its attack on the Congress, saying the opposition party has the right to protest but no one has the "licence to loot", and asserted that probe agencies will be unfazed by the Congress' "threats".

The law will take its course under the Modi government, BJP leader and former law minister Ravi Shankar Prasad said at a press conference at party headquarters and dismissed the Congress' charge of vendetta.

The opposition party claimed that the "frivolous" case against its leadership is nothing but BJP's fear of a "rising, revived" Congress and alleged that the ruling party was trying to "whitewash its sins" with such actions.

"This effort is being made to divert attention from public issues, foreign policy and economic crisis. The masterminds of this politics of revenge are two people who have a criminal mindset, but we will not remain silent," AICC general secretary Jairam Ramesh said addressing a press conference along with Abhishek Singhvi.

Holding black flags and placards, Congress leaders and workers raised slogans against the government and the ED as they protested on streets and outside the agency's offices across the states. In Delhi, a protest started at the AICC headquarters but the members were soon whisked away by the police.

The Congress put out explainers on social media, countering the allegations related to the financial loan given to Associated Journals Limited (AJL), the company running National Herald, and termed as false the charges that Young Indian has taken over Rs 5,000 crore worth of properties of Associated Journals.

Congress president Mallikarjun Kharge alleged that the "despotic government is hell-bent on targeting the Congress to whitewash its sins".

"BJP's economic mismanagement is spiralling out of control. Desperation is gathering steam. No vision, no solution, only diversion!", Kharge said in a post tagging Prime Minister Narendra Modi.

He alleged that the BJP is deliberately, out of vengeance, misusing the agencies and filing false cases, saying, "We will fight against this false case. If we were not afraid of the British, then what are BJP-RSS?".

BJP leader Ravi Shankar Prasad said the Congress has the right to hold 'dharanas' but that right does not extend to misappropriating public properties given by the government to the National Herald.

He outlined the main charge against the Gandhis that as 76 per cent shareholder of the Young India company, they "misappropriated" thousands of crores of real estate owned by AJL.

BJP spokesperson Sudhanshu Trivedi also said that there was no question of vendetta politics as the probe into the case began on the Delhi High Court's directive in 2013 when the Congress-led United Progressive Alliance (UPA) was in power.

He alleged that the way the Congress leadership has played with the "legacy of freedom fighters" in the National Herald case raises "ethical questions". "They transferred our freedom fighters' property (AJL) to their own child," he charged.

The Congress said that "politics of vengeance, harassment and intimidation" has been going on for the last two days, adding that its leadership, particularly CPP Chairperson Sonia Gandhi and Leader of the Opposition Rahul Gandhi have been deliberately targeted.

Singhvi said the case is nothing but vendetta in legal disguise.

"Selective justice is nothing but political thuggery," he said, asking where are the proceeds of the crime.

"This is the eighth wonder of the world, it is mocking justice, it represents the politics of vendetta," he said hitting out at the government. Ramesh said, "You have been in power for 11 years, you have no evidence, no proof, nothing - otherwise you would not have been forced to wait for the 365th day."

"This shows not only the government's panic but also their mental and moral bankruptcy. Modi ji, this is the Congress party. The blood of Rahul ji and Sonia Gandhi's own people is mixed in the soil of this country, show these false threats to someone else," he said.

"We cannot be silenced. We will continue to raise public issues," he said

AICC general secretary K C Venugopal shared pictures of protests by Congress leaders across the country on X and said, "Whenever Modi fears, he puts forth the ED."

Congress leader Pawan Khera, in a video post on X, said it was the British who used to fear the publication National Herald in the past while it is the RSS now.

"The British were irritated before 1947 with the National Herald, Gandhi family and Congress party, and now the Gandhis are getting irritated in the year 2025. The Gandhi family and the Congress party were the voice of the oppressed then and still are today," he said.

Singhvi claimed that the government is building a false narrative that the Gandhi family had made money and had usurped properties of AJL, whereas Young India is only a non-profit company and its shareholders have not benefitted even a single penny.

Disturbing collapse of law and order in Assam, alleges Gaurav Gogoi

PTI, GUWAHATI: Senior Congress leader Gaurav Gogoi on Wednesday alleged that Assam is witnessing a "disturbing collapse" of law and order, and has become a police state where "intimidation and miscarriage of justice have become the norm".

Gogoi, the deputy leader of the Congress in Lok Sabha, made the comment after visiting party spokesperson Reetam Singh, who is at present in Morigaon district jail after being arrested multiple times in various cases registered across the state.

"Over the past few days, Congress spokesperson @ SinghReetam has been relentlessly targeted and implicated in one case after another. I visited Morigaon District Jail yesterday to meet him and extend my solidarity," Gogoi said in a post on X.

As it was the first day of Bohag, the Assamese new year month, the MP handed him some 'pitha' and other traditional sweets.

"Assam is witnessing a disturbing collapse of law and order - a police state where intimidation and miscarriage of justice have become the norm. Ordinary people are speaking up. I stand with the people of Assam," said Gogoi, the MP of Jorhat.

Delhi HC comes down heavily on school for treating students with indignity

PTI, NEW DELHI: The Delhi High Court on Wednesday pulled up Delhi Public School Dwarka for treating students with "indignity" over a fee dispute by confining them in a library and not allowing them to attend classes or interact with peers.

Justice Sachin Datta said the school, which was treating students like "chattel", deserved to be shut down.

The court stressed on placing some safeguards to ensure that the students were not "tortured" by the school, which was running the institution merely as a "money making machine".

Parents stage a protest outside the Delhi Directorate of Education (DoE) over fee hike by private schools, in New Delhi

In dramatic scenes, several students in their school uniforms, with books and bags, were present during the court proceedings along with their parents.

"I am concerned with you treating the students in a shabby and inhumane way which is brought out in the inspection report. Assuming the fee is not paid, you are entitled to take action but surely not in this manner. What is this going on? Inability to pay fees does not give the school the licence to treat students with such indignity," the judge said.

The high court examined an inspection report of an eight-member committee led by the district magistrate (southwest), flagging several discriminatory practices against students amid the fee hike row.

Student leader smears cow dung on principal's office in retaliation to classroom experiment

PTI, NEW DELHI: A 'research experiment' conducted at Delhi University's Lakshmi Bai College involving the application of a traditional cow dung-based slurry on classroom walls has led to protests from the Delhi University Students' Union (DUSU).

The experiment, carried out by Principal Pratyush Vatsala and a faculty team, involved applying a mixture containing cow dung to the walls of classrooms. Vatsala stated that the initiative was part of a research project titled "Study of Heat Stress Control by Using Traditional Indian Knowledge." The project aimed to explore indigenous, eco-friendly methods of reducing heat in temporary classroom structures that become particularly hot during summer months.

According to the principal, the project was launched in response to students' concerns about high indoor temperatures. "The classrooms where we held the experiment are located in porta cabins, not permanent structures... Several students had approached us regarding the heat. So, we decided to try indigenous methods to make these classrooms cooler," Vatsala said.

Dr. Shwetank, an assistant professor of environmental studies overseeing the experiment, clarified that the applied material was not cow dung alone. "The slurry used comprised 40% clay soil, 10% gypsum, 10% red soil, 10% husk and straw, and 30% cow dung," he explained. "It is being misunderstood that only cow dung was used. Students were also involved in the process, and classes are continuing in the same rooms, with students even painting on the treated walls."

A video showing Principal Vatsala applying the slurry was circulated in the college's faculty WhatsApp group and later spread widely on social media, drawing criticism from some students.

On Tuesday, DUSU president Ronak Khatri staged a protest by smearing cow dung on the walls of the principal's office. Khatri later posted about the action on social media platform X, stating that the protest was meant to mirror the treatment of classroom walls.

"No consent was taken from students for such an initiative," Khatri said. "Instead of providing air conditioners, cow dung has been applied on classroom walls. I visited the room, and there was a strong smell of cow dung. No classes were being held there at the time."
