Aiz Mhaka Falea Tuka: First Konkani hip-hop gospel album

As Easter marks a day of resurrection and hope, Bongisio's 'Aiz Mhaka Falea Tuka' makes history as the first-ever Konkani hip-hop gospel album to be released. It will bring Gospel to Goa's streets, beats to the faithful, and a message of love to all

One might have heard Gospel music and even Gospel songs in Konkani but now Goans and Konkani lovers can listen to Gospel songs in the hip-hop genre in Konkani. In a powerful fusion of faith, rhythm, and culture, Goan rapper Bongisio is making history this Easter with the release of 'Aiz Mhaka Falea Tuka,' the first-ever Konkani Hip-Hop Gospel album. Carisio Azavedo, popularly known by his stage name Bongisio is building his legacy for Konkani rap and this marks another first for him.

The remarkable debut

Bongisio's debut album, is performed in Konkani and features collaborations with fellow artists MC Sammy and Colasco, with additional contributions from Bongisio's father, renowned saxophonist Antonio C. Azavedo. The album is presented under the creative banner of Goanbyblood, a collective rooted in Goan culture and music.

Translating to "If I get it today, you'll get it tomorrow," the album title captures the spirit of brotherhood, love, affection, care and helping one another. Bongisio, known for his aggressive and experimental sound, chose Gospel and his mother tongue, Konkani, to reach out to the youth and reconnect them with the teachings of Jesus Christ.

"This one's for the youth of Goa," he says, "for those who vibe to beats but need a message too. I always wanted to make a Gospel album, and I knew if I ever did, it would be in Konkani. This is the language of my people, and this is how I reach their hearts."

A musical family tribute

The album is dedicated to Bongisio's late mother, Bella Teles e Azavedo. Adding a rich layer of heritage, Bongisio's father, Antonio, a veteran saxophonist, who once played with Goa's musical legend Lorna, contributed saxophone parts to some tracks—making the album a true family affair.

A message for the youth

Through hip-hop, Bongisio wants to show today's generation that praising Jesus can be as real and raw as any beat drop. "I meet a lot of youngsters and when they hear these songs, there's a light in their eyes. If this music brings even one of them closer to the Lord, it's all worth it," concludes Bongisio.

A divine challenge

The journey of 'Aiz Mhaka Falea Tuka' began with a divine nudge. During Lent, Bongisio challenged himself to create an entire album dedicated to Jesus. He started writing and producing on April 10, and in a span of five intense days, completed all ten tracks—each a unique spiritual expression through hip-hop.

He explains "It wasn't just me, it was the Lord working through me. Every beat, every line, felt like His hands guiding mine. I've made a lot of music before, but this one brought me to tears. It was magical."

BBVM students hold their golden jubilee reunion

The students of the 1975 SSC batch of Bal Bharati Vidya Mandir (BBVM), Ribandar, held a memorable reunion to celebrate their Golden Jubilee. This was the first SSC (Class 10) batch of the school.

The get-together was organised on the school premises at Ribandar and was also attended by some of their former teachers, who fondly recalled memories of yesteryears in their addresses. The occasion was graced by the current Administrator of the school, noted educationist Panadurang Nadkarni, and headmistress Apolonia Fernandes.

Teachers from the 1975 batch who attended the reunion included Timothy Lobo, Ashok Shenvi, Irene Cardozo, and Vishwanath Halarnkar. Rich tributes were paid by both students and teachers to the school's founder principal, late Gurunath Shetty, who, along with his wife, worked tirelessly to lay the foundation of the institution and elevate it to great heights. Avdhoot Kamat, Madhav Bhide, Santana Rodrigues, Naresh Naik, Nisha Panvelkar, and Milan Nagarsekar coordinated the arrangements for the reunion and the sumptuous homemade lunch.
