PANJIM: Environmental activists from both Goa and Karnataka have stepped up their campaigns against the diversion of water from the Mhadei River, calling for immediate measures to safeguard the Western Ghats and its fragile ecosystems. On Tuesday, protests and rallies took place in Panjim and Belagavi, highlighting growing resistance on both sides of the border.

In Goa, activists gathered at Azad Maidan to decry the state government's inaction on the establishment of a tiger reserve, despite a High Court directive that links conservation efforts with the protection of the Mhadei River. They warned that continued political delay could lead to irreversible damage to the state's lone major river and its surrounding biodiversity.

Activist Rajan Ghate sharply criticised the government's legal manoeuvres. "When the High Court ordered for the creation a tiger reserve, the government could have implemented the order immediately, but it went to the Supreme Court. The government is simply wasting taxpayers' money," he said.

Ghate underscored the cultural and ecological importance of Mhadei, saying, "Mhadei can be preserved only if the Mhadei Wildlife Sanctuary is declared as a tiger

"Mhadei can be preserved only if the Mhadei Wildlife Sanctuary is declared as a tiger reserve. If Belgaum can protest against the diversion of Mhadei, why is the Goa government staying quiet? It's crucial to declare Mhadei a tiger reserve – Rajan Ghate, activist

"Activists in Belgaum, Khanapur and Kankumbi in Karnataka are demanding that Mhadei waters should not be diverted. Why then are the Goans silent? It is only when Goans have to hit the streets will they understand why there is a scarcity of drinking water despite heavy rains – Xencor Polgi, activist

Activist Xencor Polgi questioned the passivity of Goans and alleged that private interests are behind the delays.

CALANGUTE/PANJIM: The simmering discontent among Goa's taxi drivers over the draft Goa Transport Aggregator Guidelines, 2025, reached a new pitch on Tuesday as they met with Calangute MLA Michael Lobo at his Parra residence to voice their opposition. The heated discussion underscored the drivers' fears that the new guidelines threaten their livelihoods, while Lobo emphasised the need for digital transparency to address tourists' complaints about inconsistent fares.

Lobo assured the drivers he would arrange meetings with Chief Minister Pramod Sawant and the Transport Minister to discuss their concerns.

"One driver will charge Rs 1,500 and another Rs 1,200 for the same trip. This should not happen. When customers book a cab through an app, the local taxis outside the resorts create problems. Guests should not leave Goa with bad memories. For transparency, I'm with the government – Michael Lobo, Calangute MLA

"We don't want aggregators. We work day and night while they take a commission. They get rich, and we stay where we are. Our leaders call us the taxi mafia, but we're just trying to support our families – Srikhand Gavkar, veteran driver from Valpoi

KANKUMBI, KARNATAKA: The skies across the Western Ghats are dark with clouds bringing heavy rain, but at Kankumbi, across the border from Goa in Karnataka, the flow of water from the Kalsa canal into the Mhadei River has come to a complete halt.

According to environmentalists and officials, the Karnataka government has reversed the canal's flow direction, diverting precious water resources toward

Sixteen parties write to the prime minister demanding a special session

PTI, NEW DELHI: INDIA bloc parties on Tuesday rallied together to push their demand for a Special Session of Parliament in the wake of Operation Sindoor, with leaders from 16 parties writing to Prime Minister Narendra Modi, stressing that there were "serious questions facing the nation".

Senior opposition leaders, who held a meeting here, asserted that the session was needed to discuss a series of events, including the Pahalgam attack, followed by Operation Sindoor, US President Donald Trump's claim of brokering a ceasefire between India and Pakistan, and the death of civilians in border areas in Pakistan shelling.

The leaders said they stood with the government after the Pahalgam attack, and through Operation Sindoor, and they should now accept their demand for a special session.

"There are serious questions facing the nation about the terror attack, killing of civilians in Poonch, Uri and Rajouri, the ceasefire announcements, and the implications on our national security and foreign policy. We have supported the government's efforts to engage with the international community on India's position," opposition leaders said in a joint letter.

Indian-origin man on life support in Aus after cops kneel on his neck

PTI, MELBOURNE: A 42-year-old Indian-origin man is on life support with suspected brain damage in Australia after a police officer allegedly knelt on his neck during an arrest, mistaking him for being involved in domestic violence. The incident occurred last week on Payneham Road at Royston Park in Adelaide's eastern suburbs.

Gaurav Kundi, father of two children, is on life support with suspected brain damage after the arrest, the australiatoday.com news portal reported on Monday.

The video footage of the incident obtained by 9news.com portal shows Kundi being forced onto Payneham Road while he and his wife, Amritpal Kaur, loudly protest his innocence.

"I've done nothing wrong," Kundi shouts, while Kaur films and cries out that the police are acting unfairly.

Kundi loses consciousness after being tackled to the ground. He is currently at the Royal Adelaide Hospital on life support.

Kaur said an officer allegedly drove a knee into Kundi's neck – a move that echoes the 2020 case of George Floyd, a Black man, in the US that sparked widespread protests against police brutality and racial injustice, both in America and internationally.

"I stopped filming because I panicked when the officer knelt on him," Kaur told 9News. She said Kundi's head was slammed against the police car and the road during the arrest.

Kundi was taken to the Royal Adelaide Hospital, where doctors say his brain and neck nerves are severely damaged.
