MONSOON BRINGS HOPE FOR PONDA'S TRADITIONAL VEGETABLE FARMERS

Farmers in hilly areas prepare for July-August harvest; seek government support, subsidies, compensation for crop damage and recognition

Team Herald

PONDA: With Goa witnessing a familiar shift towards locally-grown vegetables, reducing reliance on neighbouring States, several farmers in hilly and sloping areas are diligently preparing for the harvest, expected in July and August.

Cultivating a variety of seasonal crops, including cucumber, bitter gourd, ridge gourd, brinjal, radish, and pumpkin, the farmers in the region stressed the need for government support to enhance their production.

Beyond Curti and Farmagudi, the plateaus and hills of Bandora are flourishing with monsoon vegetable cultivation. In Ponda taluka, numerous families engaged in farming are involved in growing these most sought-after and delicious local vegetables.

The arrival of the monsoon has brought joy, as they have already put in much effort over the past two months tilling the land and sowing seeds. Their produce is anticipated to be readily available, particularly along highways, starting in July.

The hills and plateaus in the taluka have turned green with the arrival of monsoon, farmers are optimistic that it will further aid the growth of their crops.

In Curti, farmers are cultivating vegetables such as cucumber, lady finger, Gosal, and Tambdi bhaji. These monsoon vegetables are expected to reach the market in July and August, continuing till Ganesh Chaturthi, a period when cucumbers and other vegetables provide a substantial income for them.

Sudhakar Gaude mentioned that he and his three brothers have been cultivating vegetables on the hills for a long time, utilising traditional techniques passed down through generations. While they are not legal owners or tenants, they have been engaged in this practice for several years. Sudhakar also noted that he had filed a tenancy application around 30 years ago, but a decision is still pending. The farmers emphasised that growing vegetables on the hills requires specific knowledge acquired from their ancestors. While the current generation continues this tradition, they hope for government encouragement and support to ensure its continuation in the modern era for future generations.

The farmers urged the government to introduce financial schemes, emphasising the lack of subsidies or compensation for crop damage. They highlighted significant losses incurred last year due to heavy rains. They believe that providing such support would help preserve this traditional practice, protect the hills, and support the farming community.

Prabhakar Gaude stated that cultivating monsoon vegetables is a traditional occupation inherited from their forefathers. He pointed out that when they bring their produce to sell in July and August, customers often heavily negotiate prices.

He hoped consumers will consider the hard work involved.

Local farmers depend on this traditional activity for their livelihood, investing considerable effort in preparations two months in advance, including installing wooden fences, tilling the land, and protecting their crops from wild animals throughout the season. Some even hire water tankers for pre-monsoon preparations.

FIX OR FARCE?

SABINA DE SOUSA

Over 6 months after the electricity department dug up roads in Siolim-Sodiem for underground cabling, the damaged stretches were left unrepaired — riddled with potholes, debris, and abandoned "work in progress" signs. After the issue was flagged by a reader in Citizen Herald last Sunday, workers finally turned up mid-week, but their quick fix made matters worse. Loose mud from the roadsides was dumped into the holes as a patch-up, only to be washed away by rains, creating a slippery, hazardous mess that's already led to skids and falls. Is this what passes for road restoration?

Chain-snatching incidents spark fear among Salcete residents

Team Herald

MARGAO: Residents of Salcete, especially senior citizens, are alarmed over the reoccurring chain snatching incidents across the taluka.

Two days ago in Davorlim, a woman was targeted in broad daylight; her mangalsutra was stolen by a scooter rider wearing a raincoat. Maina Curtorim police have registered a case under BNS 2023, and an investigation is underway.

According to police, the incident took place around 8.30 am near the Shripad Shri Vallabh Temple, Mugalli, Davorlim. Vaishnavi Manerikar, 40, reported that an unknown male on a two-wheeler snatched her gold mangalsutra, valued at Rs 1.39 lakh, while she was on her morning walk.

Police stated the accused, riding alone with a helmet, approached from behind, snatched the mangalsutra, and quickly fled. The area was deserted, and despite the victim's cries for help, the rider escaped. Maina Curtorim PSI Gaurav Naik and his team inspected the site.

Such incidents have now resurfaced with Suresh Naik from Davorlim stating that a chain-snatching gang operates in Salcete. He urged the police to increase patrols in isolated areas, particularly during morning walks and church services. He noted that non-functional streetlights in parts of Davorlim contribute to these incidents, which target senior citizens and women during early hours.

Past incidents include the snatching of a gold chain worth Rs 90,000 from Inacina Francisco Fernandes in Avedem, and mangalsutras stolen from two senior citizens in Davorlim and Aquem-Margao.

In Davorlim, two individuals robbed a 63-year-old woman of her mangalsutra worth Rs 1.90 lakh. In Aquem-Margao, a motorcycle rider stole a woman's mangalsutra and other gold ornaments valued at Rs one lakh.

Speaking on the condition of anonymity, a police inspector stated that they are investigating potential links between these cases due to similar methods used. Several suspects have been questioned, and the investigations are on.

Mystery shrouds death of 16-yr-old student in Colva

Team Herald

MARGAO: The death of the 16-year-old student from Karnataka, who died by suicide at her Colva residence, is shrouded in mystery. The incident involved a student of Class X, and despite the police recording over seven statements from parents and school friends, the motive remains unclear.

The student's parents are vegetable vendors in the Colva area, and she has siblings including an elder brother also in Class X and younger sisters in local schools. Colva police have recorded statements from the parents and the deceased's school friends. A thorough search of the residence was conducted, but no suicide note was discovered.

According to the Colva police, their team visited the site upon receiving information and initiated an inquiry. Further investigation revealed that the deceased and her younger sister were alone at home, and the incident occurred while the younger sister was asleep. Following this, a panchanama was conducted, and the body has been preserved at the South Goa District Hospital (SGDH), Margao, for medico-legal procedures.

The post-mortem examination has been completed, and a detailed report is awaited. Colva PSI Nikhil Khajnekar is leading the investigation.

Non-functional traffic signal at Gogol junction sparks chaos and safety concerns

Team Herald

MARGAO: The traffic signal at the four roads junction at Gogol in Fatorda Police Station jurisdiction, which has been out of service for the past 10 days, is causing inconvenience and safety concerns for commuters and pedestrians alike.

According to a local taxi driver, the signal has been non-functional for over a week, and there has been no police presence to manage the traffic flow in its absence. When contacted, PI Filomena Costa of Fatorda Traffic Cell acknowledged the problem and the resulting inconvenience to vehicle owners.

PI Costa stated that upon assuming charge, they had already informed the relevant authorities about the situation and that assurances have been given to repair the signal as quickly as possible.

Adding to these concerns, Suresh Naik, an employee at a private bank in the area, emphasised that this junction is one of the busiest in Fatorda with constant traffic. The lack of a working signal is making it extremely difficult and hazardous for both vehicles and pedestrians to navigate the intersection, especially during peak hours.

Naik pointed out that the non-functional signal inevitably leads to traffic congestion, disrupting the normal traffic flow and causing confusion. He believed that while manual traffic control by the police is a necessity in such situations, it is less efficient and can contribute to further delays.

Ramesh Prabhu, resident highlighted the difficulties faced by students from nearby schools and colleges, as well as office-goers, who regularly cross this busy road during peak hours.

As per the court order, their release is contingent upon executing a personal bond of Rs 1 lakh each with one surety of the same amount. The accused must provide a permanent residential address with proof to the court and inform the court of any address changes. The provided address will be verified by the investigating officer.

Additionally, they must furnish their current mobile number(s) and notify the court and investigating officer of any future changes. They are prohibited from leaving Goa without the court's permission, and if they possess a passport, it must be surrendered.
