Curti colony locals protest gutter widening work

Claim it has blocked access to their flats; want access restored immediately

Team Herald

PONDA: Tensions escalated on Wednesday at the old housing board colony in Curti, Khandepar, as residents protested the commencement of gutter widening work by a contractor, claiming that it has severely impacted their daily lives by blocking access to their flats within the Housing Board and threatened further agitation if their access is not restored by Thursday morning.

Expressing strong disapproval, they cited the heavy rains in July as an inappropriate time to begin such work. Residents confronted the contractor, expressing their frustration that the digging began without prior intimation.

A primary concern for the residents is the one-meter-wide trench, which is overflowing with water from the surrounding hills. There is a significant risk of children or adults accidentally falling into the gutter and being swept into the main nullah. Additionally, residents are concerned that the drainage pipes provided are too small for the width of the newly dug gutter.

The sudden digging work has also blocked the main entry and exit route for residents. They have warned of filing a formal complaint against the contractor, citing obstruction of a vital access road, public nuisance, potential endangerment during medical emergencies, and the risk posed to children by the open trenches. They claimed that the situation has hindered their ability to go to work and conduct other daily routines, affecting their livelihoods.
